Mrs Sutherland responded with a few appropriate remarks.

Gen George Washington, arted by little E. C. French, ir., and Martha Washington, acted by little Julia Lorentzen, presided at a recestion. In which the minuet was danced. All of the little children were in the picturesque Colonial costume, with powdered hair, and they did their part with winsome grace and delightful lack of self consciousness. The youngsters averaged from four to seven years in see. Mrs. Lee Orndorff directed the children, assisted by Miss Chara Louise Fink. Miss Gertrude Vale played the dance music for the children. Those taking part were Margaret Stewart, Virginta Kirkpatrick, Anna Semple, Lois Bagwell, Romaine Stafford, Nancy Pettna, Elsie Bauer, Dorothy Tell McBroom, Dorothy Mus Allen, Virginia Orndorff, Mary Curtis, Ruth Staten, Alfred Ware, Richard Semple, Dan Stewart and Adelaide Strong.

Following this a pretty fing drill was given by the following children, Margaret Spence, Mary Mason Helmlek, lielin Robinson, Adelaide Overstreet, Lily Staten, Leuise Francon, Lee Cendorff, Jimmir Coles, Jimmir Spence and John Watsan, The hoys were white shirts and the girls white dresses and they carried small flars and executed a number of pretty marching figures, Mrs. Fred W. PVERY resident of El Paso should mother, displaying a talented child, would be satisfied to have the guests merely hear the dear child's piano solo, say behind a heavy curtain? An odd thing, isn't it, that people seem to enjoy music better when they can see the performer as well as hear the music he produces? True, there are people who like to shut their eyes and loss themselves to everything but the flood of melody enchanting their ears, but the average run of ordinary humans prefer to enjoy with their eyes as well as their ears. The performer asems to make the misic more appealing, if he can present it in a pleasing way as well as with a pleasing result. Folks like to see the how of things. It is perfectly natural, too, for what ence, said with an amused drawl:

Now, I wonder what man's mind I have?

Little Dick Semple was an unconscious star actor at the Regent's day entertainment of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Saiurday. He set the audience off into rippics of laughter, and the best thing about it was the little chap had no idea that he was entertaining every body so hughly. This little boy evidently is of an inquiring, investigative and independent turn of mind. He was one of the actors in the miniature Colonial reception and was a very gay and zellant little figure in a pink satin costume with a big white wig and plumed cocked hat. With the other little children, he was waiting in the front row of seats in the auditorium for the time to go on the stage. Finally little Dick became tired of waiting and so he started out to investigate the stage all by himself. As solemn as the proverbial owl and utterly unconscious of the audience, he climbed up the steps to the stage, walked all around the stage, looking it over, investigated the palms, flowers, flags and planes and then, having seen everything there was to be seen, he marched off sgals, still unaware of the audience, Later, after the little reception guests had made their formal hows to Gen and Mrs. Washington, when the minute was started, little likek decided that he could enloy watching the dancers from the audience better than from the stage, so he climbed down the stage and hack to his seat in the front row, to the amazement of the guests. All of the children in the reception were absolutely adorable, because they were having such a good time and were so prettily unconscious about it all.
